Studios of Denver Community Television

bites to make this a decent little "quickie" history of the A.N.P.

About the Production

One night in 2002 as I was surfing the television channels, I suddenly caught the voice of Dr. William Pierce and was astounded. This was the public access channel here in Denver known as "DCTV" which notoriously ran only the drivel of kooks, cranks, Negroids, etc.

Naturally, I stuck it out to the end of the program and was careful to jot down the contact information. I at once called the telephone number and left a short message to the effect that I had been a friend and associate of Dr. Pierce from the old days and that I should love to meet with any of their representatives locally sometime.
